1. The army training grounds near Turany, not far from Turcansky Svaty Martin, are visited about twice a month by troops from the Turcansky Svaty Martin garrison, who are billeted in a wooden hut in the north corner of the grounds and who train in this area for about a week.
2. In the spring of 1952, special training started here with soldiers who did not belong to the Martin garrison. They were training hunting dogs to carry anti-tank mines with time fuses attached under their stomachs.. They are trained to obey orders to run to a specified target, lie down under it, and wait for the explosion. It is not known whether the mechanism is designed to release when the dog lies down.
